Understanding what is Business Development

2

What every LCVP BD should know

Business Development

is an ever-evolving concept, that can be summarized as the ideas, initiatives and activities aimed towards making a business better. This includes increasing revenues, growth in terms of business expansion, increasing profitability by building strategic partnerships, and making strategic business decisions.

What drives Business Development?

Due to the wide open scope of business development and activities, there are no standard practices and principles. From exploring new opportunities in external markets, to introducing efficiencies in internal business operations, everything can fit under the business development umbrella. Those involved in business development need to come up with creative ideas, but their proposals may prove to be unfeasible or unrealistic. It's important to be flexible. Employees charged with business development should try to seek out and take constructive criticism, and remember that it's a process.

1. The current state of the business in terms of SWOT analysis (strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats).
2. Competitor developments
3. The customer profile
4. New domains/products/sectors eligible for business expansion, which may complement the existing business
5. The current state of the overall industry and growth projections
6. Primary sources of sales/revenues of current business and dependencies
7. New and unexplored market opportunities
8. The long-term view, especially with regards to the initiatives being proposed

sales funnel

Prospect

The process of sourcing new, early-stage leads to begin working through the sales process.

Lead Qualification

Deciding whether or not they're a good-fit lead for your business and whether or not they'll likely move forward in the journey.

Company Research

Research to offer a more tailored and personalized experience, so they most likely will want to close a deal. It involves understanding their challenges.

Pitch

The presentation step is typically when your salesperson runs a formal product or service demonstration for your prospect.

Objection Handling

It's common for prospects to have objections to you, which is why this is a specific step in the sales process.

Close

This step of the sales process refers to any late-stage activities that happen as a deal approaches closing..

Nurturing

"The final step of the sales process also involves continuing to communicate and reinforce value to customers (upsell, cross-sell, etc.)
