

How to build your portfolio

What and how to pitch as products

session objectives.

1

Relevancy of having a portfolio

2

Portfolio and proposal structure

3

Tips to consider

A product portfolio is the complete collection of products or services that a business sells. The portfolio may be straightforward and consist of a single product, or it may consist of multiple, diversified product lines

What are the products you can sell?

An AIESEC portfolio can have a wide range of products, starting from an employer branding perspective (conferences, EwA events, digital campaigns) to a talent acquisition standpoint (GT) and lastly the CSR sphere. Keep in mind that our portfolios can always be innovated and broadened in order to adapt to the current market needs.

A sales proposal is a paper or digital document used to pitch services or products to prospective clients and current customers.

Minimums to put in a proposal:

- information about AIESEC
- characteristics about your products
- value proposition of the products
- relevant data they can use for ROI
- packages with benefits and pricings
- testimonials
- current partners
- contacts

Some tips and tricks

K.I.S.S (Keep it short and simple)

Try to make the information as clear and concise as possible. Remember that the partners need to understand from the first time what they get out of the partnership. Structure your content based on the C.A.B framework so your products can be clear for the stakeholders.

1

2

Listen to your prospects

There's no better way to understand what prospects' want than listening to them. Invest time for meeting with prospects, current partners, or alumni, and asking questions related to our value proposition.

Understand their main pains and needs to start building your portfolio from there.

Think outside of the box

Companies see AIESEC as an innovative organization full of passionate people!

After you listen to the companies' needs, think of something they might haven't seen before. They will always appreciate your efforts in providing new solutions to their problems.

3

Take advantage of global resources

Work smarter not harder! Use the global and regional portfolio as a guide. You can either adapt or downscale most of the products, services, or initiatives that the global and regional portfolio include. Moreover the commission has over 100 MCVPs BD so you can always reach out to them to ask for GCPs.

4

global academies