Account Management

Account management, used primarily in B2B sales, is the process of nurturing and growing your existing customer relationships. When creating an account plan, you seek to understand your customer's business by identifying their key initiatives, problems, and challenges. Your objective is to deliver value that helps them achieve their goals and increase their sales.

Besides every strategy, tool and plan, account management is also about art, creativity and having good relationships with your customers. Keep that in mind!

ACCOUNT PLANNING

Where to start?

1. Transition

Make sure your predecessor shares with you everything related to the history of the partnership, the current context and ongoing projects, results achieved and possible ways forward.

You should also be introduced to the stakeholders and have access to the tools and spaces.

2. Research

Make sure you understand the context of the company, their focus and the projects that they are running within and outside the departments you work with.

You can also prepare some questions for the partnership manager, so you can have first hand information.

3. Plan

Now that you have all the necessary information, you can start planning how the next year should look like for your account.

Besides the projects you already have in place, map out other opportunities that could result in a valuable proposal for your partner. What solution can you offer to them?

Make sure you involve your partnership manager in this process to ensure a relevant planning.

Map out possible ways to grow the account

Make sure you understand the deliverables according to the contracts

Understand their decision making process and key stakeholders

Identify targets and revenues per initiative

Establish clear strategies and routines with your partner

After planning

Plan your next visits

Partnership visits are an excellent opportunity to get to know your partner more in-depth, identify points of improvement and build trust.

During the visits

Regardless if it's virtual or physical, prepare an agenda including:

- Results
- Challenges
- Planning review
- Upscaling ideas (how to nurture the collaboration)
- Stakeholders involved
- Any other relevant information

Have always a next step

Hopefully, and if everything goes as it was supposed to, make sure to have the next steps clear, as well as sending the output over an email to the partnership responsible.

ACCOUNT TRACKING

CURRENT STATE

You need to make sure you know everything that is happening with your account everyday, so you are able to adapt your strategies and ensure things are on track.

PREDICTIONS

When tracking your Accounts it will enable you to predict possible future challenges, future changes that you might need to make and it will enable you to be proactive with your account. On the other hand it will give you predictions on the amount of Revenues and the timing you will be able to receive them.

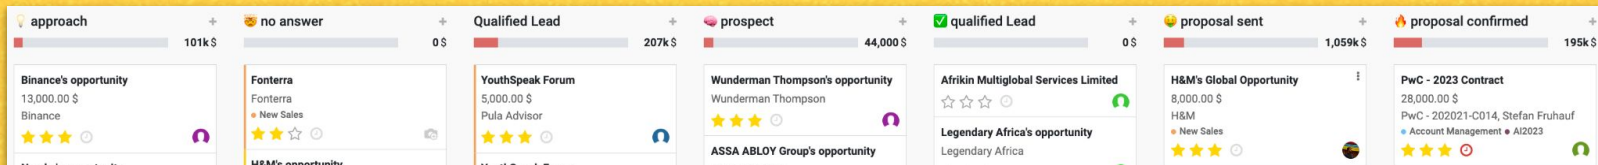

why do we need to track our accounts?

1. Always use your CRM and planning tool to keep track and document for your successor.
2. Follow a constant routine that allows you to have constant communication with your partner.
3. Take some time to review the strategies for your account besides the daily deliverables.

REPORTING

why is it important to do reporting?

ROI

Showcasing the Return of Investment of the partnership and showing the things we have achieved together. Your partners need to know how many people watched a livestream, how many people attended a conference, how many people you reached with a digital campaign, therefore you will need to provide the data in order to measure your success.

DOCUMENT

Reports are a great way to document the achievements and the history of your partnerships. If you store it in your CRM also future generations will be able to go back to them and gain insights about the partnership.

WAY FORWARD

Once you created a report you can analyse it and then create together with the partner a way forward, since you know what things worked well and what could be improved. It can be also a great chance to upscale the partnership.

- After a conference or webinar.
- After an EwA initiative has been delivered.
- After a digital campaign.
- Quarterly or after a cycle of Global Talent.
- Annually for contract negotiations and as a general summary of the contract year.

To take into consideration when reporting

Identify include data and compare and analyze it to show the implications to your partner.

Add qualitative insights such as feedback or insights from surveys about the partnership.

Add an evaluation and conclusions and suggest next steps.

Understand their decision making process and key stakeholders

Add pictures if you have taken any.

Words from the Account Manager

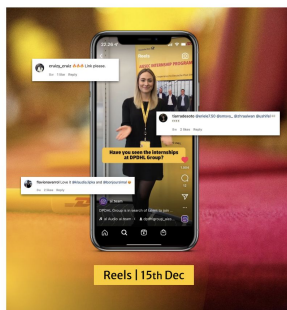

Dear CEO for One Month team,

As every year, it has been a pleasure for AIESEC to collaborate with you in the promotion of CEO for One Month.

This year, we have seen the results of the positioning of the program among AIESECers. The 2023 promotion has brought a growth in the amount of applicants in our global campaign. But what makes me happier, is to see that our conversion rates have increased substantially, as this year our members are more aware about the program and see great value in participating.

We thank you for putting your trust on us one more time. We really value our partnership with an organization that believes in youth leadership.

Yours truly,
César Ramirez

Before upscaling

- Plan the BD initiatives in the contract, keeping in mind all phases: preparation, execution, and reporting.
- Brainstorm other activities that could complement and amplify the one included in the contract or new activities that respond to the partner's pains.
- This information and the account analysis will help you select which accounts should be prioritized in terms of upscale strategy.

Ideas for upscaling

- Explore different departments and budget.
- Offer the possibility of a multi-year partnership contract.
- Exclusivity for MCP elections.
- Champion to manage big exchange volume (similar JD of regional/global coordinator.
